Ginseng Harvesting in the Cherokee National Forest:

Ginseng is a native plant of Tennessee that grows mostly in cool, moist mountain forests. This perennial herb is highly prized for its large, fleshy roots which are believed to have medicinal value. Permits are required to collect ginseng in the national forest.

Range-wide, wild ginseng populations have declined over the past decade. The Forest Service is limiting the collection of ginseng in the Cherokee National Forest because of concerns about sustainable harvest levels. Forest Service managers believe it is in everyone's best interest to limit the amount of collection to help ensure that the plant's future sustainability is protected.

Collecting Season & Permits

Starting in 2013, the Forest Service is implementing the following process for permitting ginseng collecting in the Cherokee National Forest:

- The 2013 ginseng collecting season will be from September 16th through September 30th. This two week period will be the only time that ginseng can be legally collected in the Cherokee National Forest by valid permit holders.
- The Forest Service will issue a total of 40 permits, each with a maximum limit of 25 roots.
- A lottery will be held to determine the 40 permittees. Twenty permits will be issued for the northern half of the Forest (Watauga & Unaka Ranger Districts) and twenty permits will be issued for the southern half of the Forest (Tellico & Ocoee Ranger Districts).
- Lottery applicants may only apply for either the north or the south Cherokee NF.
- Permits will cost $20 and are limited to one permit per person per year. Permittees must be at least 18 years of age.
- Five ginseng collection zones have been designated for the north Cherokee NF (Watauga & Unaka Districts), and five collecting zones for the south Cherokee NF (Tellico & Ocoee Districts). Only one zone on each half of the Forest will be open for collection each year. Collection zones will be rotated each year to allow plants a five year recovery period necessary to help ensure populations remain sustainable.
