

TRAILS
SUPERSTITION WILDERNESS

There is a network of some 170 miles of “system” trails serving the Superstition Wilderness Area and contiguous areas. Their condition varies from satisfactory to very poor. All trails are closed to motor vehicles and mechanical transport such as bikes.

Use a great deal of caution when traveling on backcountry trails such as this one and be aware of the risks you assume.

A few brief comments are in order about the following trail:

Boulder Canyon Trail 103: 7.3 miles long. A rough but interesting trail providing several scenic vistas. Parts are located adjacent to Boulder Creek and the stream crossings are subject to flooding. Not recommended for horses due to loose rocks. Elevation: 1,680 - 2,300 feet. Termini: Canyon Lake TH (Highway 88) and Trail 104.
