Summary

This document contains recommendations for use in revision of the Daniel Boone National Forest Land and Resource Management Plan. It represents the best knowledge and, where research or literature was unavailable, the best judgment of the authors. As such, substantial judgments were required. In the absence of complete and precise data, judgments and logical conclusions based on available information and experiences are suggested. These judgments and conclusions are intended for use in developing the next generation of Forest Planning documents. Information collected in this effort will serve as a starting point from which to build species and forest habitat information databases, and facilitate adaptive management. The authors readily recognize the gaps in their knowledge and anticipate ongoing revisions as these recommendations are tested and new information becomes available. Undoubtedly much of the material presented here will prove to be accurate while other portions will need to be modified. The final selection of recommendations for management in this document is the responsibility of the deciding official.
