HISTORIC BITTERROOT VALLEY

1 HISTORIC ALTA RANGER STATION

Built in 1899, the Alta Ranger Station, located on the West Fork of the Bitterroot River, is the oldest surviving Forest Service Ranger Station in the United States. The silent little cabin speaks volumes about the early days of our national forest and the people who lived and worked here.

2 DALY MANSION

Located on 46 acres of lush landscape, the Daly Mansion is the historic home of 19th Century American industrialist Marcus Daly. The exhibits convey the story of Daly and his rise from working-class immigrant to copper magnate, as well as local, regional, and international history tied to his extended family.

3 HISTORIC DARBY RANGER STATION AND MUSEUM

Built by the CCC between 1937-39, this Forest Service Ranger Station has served many community needs over its career. Faithfully restored, it now houses artifacts, maps, and photographs that tell the story of the rugged individuals who staffed this "isolated" ranger station.

712 North Main, Darby | 406 821-3913

4 DARBY MEMORIAL PIONEER MUSEUM

The Pioneer Memorial Museum is housed in a fine hand-hewn log homestead. Here you'll find domestic artifacts, as well as work implements of the early settlers, preserved in impeccable condition.

101 East Tanner, Darby | 406 821-3753

5 HAMILTON SOUTHSIDE RESIDENTIAL HISTORIC DISTRICT

The architectural character of this pleasant district was initially shaped by copper king Marcus Daly in the 1890s. Several waves of development left an assortment of vernacular forms from high style Victorian to Romanesque to Craftsman and Colonial Revival. Picturesque Revival and Cape Cod style cottages can be found interspersed in with the earlier styles, even a Moderne style here and there. See bottom of page for web link to more ...

6 HAMILTON COMMERCIAL HISTORIC DISTRICT

19 SALISH BITTERROOT HOMELAND

cskt.org

While the Bitterroot Valley is a small slice of the overall aboriginal territory of the Salish, it stands at the heart of both the tribe's history and its creation stories. Even today, over a century after a forced removal, the Bitterroot remains a cherished homeland, a place Salish people return to often to pray, to reflect, and to reconnect with their ancestral homeland. Exhibits and interpretation on the Salish people can be found in the Bitterroot at #8 Ravalli County Museum, #10 Historic St. Mary's Mission, and #13 Travelers Rest.
