In compliance with all applicable federal, state, and local motor vehicle use regulations, drivers should be aware of their vehicular mobility and the areas where it is legal to drive a motor vehicle. The roads on the map are the official MVUM, and should be considered to be a supplement to local Forest Service regulations. This does not mean that all roads are suitable for any type of vehicle. Drivers should have information about the nature of the road and the condition of the surface before driving. They should be aware of the potential hazards and be prepared to react accordingly. The road may not be suitable for heavy vehicles, or it may require special equipment. It is the responsibility of drivers to ensure that they are equipped with the necessary gear and that they are prepared for any unexpected situations.
