Season:

Seasons along the trail- In the spring the trail is host for local races in addition to the regular users. The visitor can view the intermittent streams which will have water along with spring flowers to enjoy. Summer brings the warmer weather and steady use, and during the fall the colors of the changing leaves and clear blue skies during cooler weather make the trail and especially enjoyable time to visit. SE Missouri winters are often mild enough to use the trail year round and it is a popular geocaching location with 70 caches creating geoart in the shape of an eagle. To learn more about this activity, please go to www.geocaching.com

Trail and area uses:

In the fall the area is still open to general forest uses which include hunting, although target practice is prohibited. Be aware of the usual forest pests. No potable water is available and it is a pack in/pack out area for trash. During the summer months or any warmer weather, make sure to bring water.
