Hunters are required to use the most direct and least disruptive route to retrieve the big game. After retrieving the animal, the individual who legally took the animal may drive or be transported in a motor vehicle to the most direct and least disruptive route to transport the animal back to the vehicle. The animal must be transported in the vehicle and not on the motor vehicle roadway. When a big game animal has been legally taken, the hunter may transport the animal by private motor vehicle from the point of legal taking to the nearest designated road for game retrieval. Under certain circumstances, the designated road for game retrieval may be too short to accommodate the motor vehicle. In these cases, the hunter may use an alternate forest service road or trail to transport the animal to the nearest designated road for game retrieval. When using an alternate forest service road, the hunter is required to use the most direct and least disruptive route to transport the animal. A designated NFS road and for parking a recreational or hunting vehicle. This symbol is used for roads that are too short to accommodate a motor vehicle.

When a big game animal has been legally taken, the individual who legally took the animal may drive or be transported in a motor vehicle to the most direct and least disruptive route to transport the animal back to the vehicle. The animal must be transported in the vehicle and not on the motor vehicle roadway. When a big game animal has been legally taken, the hunter may transport the animal by private motor vehicle from the point of legal taking to the nearest designated road for game retrieval. Under certain circumstances, the designated road for game retrieval may be too short to accommodate the motor vehicle. In these cases, the hunter may use an alternate forest service road or trail to transport the animal to the nearest designated road for game retrieval. When using an alternate forest service road, the hunter is required to use the most direct and least disruptive route to transport the animal. A designated NFS road and for parking a recreational or hunting vehicle. This symbol is used for roads that are too short to accommodate a motor vehicle.

When a big game animal has been legally taken, the individual who legally took the animal may drive or be transported in a motor vehicle to the most direct and least disruptive route to transport the animal back to the vehicle. The animal must be transported in the vehicle and not on the motor vehicle roadway. When a big game animal has been legally taken, the hunter may transport the animal by private motor vehicle from the point of legal taking to the nearest designated road for game retrieval. Under certain circumstances, the designated road for game retrieval may be too short to accommodate the motor vehicle. In these cases, the hunter may use an alternate forest service road or trail to transport the animal to the nearest designated road for game retrieval. When using an alternate forest service road, the hunter is required to use the most direct and least disruptive route to transport the animal. A designated NFS road and for parking a recreational or hunting vehicle. This symbol is used for roads that are too short to accommodate a motor vehicle.