

The Ojibwe children
helped their parents
dry venison for dinner.

Go ahead one space

The Ojibwe tapped the maple trees. Days were warm and nights were cool
so collecting sap was fast.

Go ahead one space.

The Ojibwe hunted only for the food they needed.

Go ahead one space.

The wild rice crop
was fantastic.

Lose a turn while
the Ojibwe gather
this bumper crop.

There was an icy crust
on the snow making it
tough to snowshoe.

Lose a turn while
the Ojibwe take time to repair their snowshoes.

The Courier du Bois (wood runners) who didn't
work for a fur company,
traded furs before the Voyageurs reached the Ojibwe village. There were no furs left, so the Voyageurs traveled further west to find furs.

Go back four spaces.

It was a stormy and rainy spring. Lots of wind made it hard to keep the
"nasaogan" from leaking.

Lose a turn while the Ojibwe make sure their shelter is watertight.

One Voyageur pulled a muscle lifting a heavy
load of beaver pelts.
He could no longer
help on portages.

Lose a turn.

The 'pork eaters'
encountered high waves
on Lake Superior. It slowed them considerably.

Go back two spaces.

Winter snows made
the logger's job of sledding logs easier.

Go ahead two spaces.

Spring thaw came early.
The skidding road was muddy and the teamster
had a difficult time getting the logs to the river.

Go back three spaces.

The "river rats"
had trouble loosening
a log jam blocking the waterway.

Lose a turn.

The mosquitoes were thick and swarming around campers' heads while they were portaging.

Lose a turn while they put on long shirts and apply repellent.

There were a lot of beaver dams that campers had to lift their canoes up and over, being careful not to damage the dam.

Go back two spaces.

Campers did not disturb the female loon from her nest while she was incubating the eggs.

Go ahead two spaces.

Campers forgot to pick up their BWCAW entry permit from the US Forest Service Station.

Go back to START to pick up the permit.

Campers hang their bear pack the required 10 feet high and 6 feet from any tree. Their food will be there in the morning.

Take another turn.

The blueberries are ripe!!!

Go ahead one space to pick some.

The Voyageurs were tired of lyed corn and beans.

Lose a turn while they fish and search for berries.

The Voyageurs arrived early at the spring rendezvous because the river was high and fast.

Go ahead two spaces.

The wind was at the Voyageurs' backs on the big lakes, and they made good time heading to the trading camps.

Take another turn.

WILDERNESS
CHANCE

WILDERNESS CHANCE

WILDERNESS CHANCE

WILDERNESS
CHANCE

