Weminuche Wilderness Trip Planning Information

At three quarters the size of Rhode Island, the Weminuche Wilderness is the largest Wilderness area in Colorado at 499,771 acres. Originally designated as Wilderness by Congress in 1975. It is part of the National Wilderness Preservation System, established by the Wilderness Act of 1964 to "secure for the American people of present and future generations the benefits of an enduring resource of wilderness."

National Wilderness Preservation System

Welcome to Your Wilderness!

The Weminuche spans the Continental Divide, North America's geological backbone, with its headwaters diverted to both the Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

Eolus, Sunlight, and Windom peaks rise above 14,000 feet, while many others reach above 13,000 feet. With an average elevation of 10,000 feet above sea level, the Weminuche is rugged country, but its ecosystems are fragile.

As you visit, you will join thousands of others who travel in the Weminuche each year.

You can help protect the Wilderness through your knowledge and skills, and by complying with regulations.

General Safety Information

Navigation

Be sure to carry a current topographical map of the area. Signing is limited to junctions of Forest Service system trails and typically does not provide mileages.

Weather

Expect and be prepared for rain, hail, snow, or biting wind at any time of the year. Carry clothing and equipment which will keep you warm and dry, even when day-hiking.

Altitude

Elevations range from 7,000 to 14,000 feet. Pace yourself, drink water, and eat snacks to help prevent altitude sickness. Symptoms include headache, loss of appetite, and weakness or drowsiness. If affected, descend quickly. If symptoms persist, seek medical aid.

Forest Health

Much of the Weminuche Wilderness has been affected by a large outbreak of spruce beetles, which have killed the majority of mature spruce trees. Recent fires have also weakened the trees. As a result, visitors must use extra caution when traveling and camping in the vicinity of trees. Always be aware of your surroundings!

High Water

During spring snow melt, expect high, fast water. Water levels may rise dangerously with warm weather or after thunderstorms. Use caution when crossing streams or delay crossing until water levels drop.

General Regulations

Outfitters and Guides

Commercial guides and outfitters must hold a legal permit to operate within National Forests. Contact the Forest Service office nearest your destination for permit information or to ensure that your guide has a valid permit.

Reserved Campsites

Camping is prohibited within 300 feet of areas signed as “reserved” or “assigned” to permitted commercial outfitters.

Hunting

Hunting is permitted subject to regulations established by Colorado Parks and Wildlife.

Leave No Trace

Practicing a “Leave No Trace” ethic is very simple: make it hard for others to see or hear you and “leave no trace” of your visit. With your help, the wilderness resource can be managed to ensure that its unique character and values remain intact.

1. Plan Ahead and Prepare
2. Camp on Durable Surfaces
3. Dispose of Waste Properly
4. Leave What You Find
5. Minimize Campfire Impacts
6. Respect Wildlife
7. Be Considerate of Other Visitors
