Dispersed Camping Guidelines On the Mt. Hood National Forest

CAMPING:

National Forests are yours to enjoy and protect. You may camp anywhere in the Forest that is not designated for another use. Observe a few simple guidelines to make your stay safe and fun, and leave a clean forest for your children.

- * You are limited to a maximum of two 14 day stays per year, with at least a 30 day break between visits.
- * Camp at least 100 feet from a road or trail.
- * Look for a spot away from fragile meadows, and at least 100 feet away from the shoreline of any stream or lake.

WOOD FIRES:

Campfires are a familiar and warm camping tradition, but there are some things to consider before building a fire.

- * You must have at least a two gallon bucket of water, a long handled shovel, and an axe with you.
- * As always, remember Smokey Bear's message to "Prevent Forest Fires," and be sure your fire is DEAD OUT before you leave. Drown it, turn it, stir it, and touch it.
- * Use an existing fire ring, or if you need to make one, please disperse the ring when you are finished with it.
- * If you use charcoal briquettes, please be sure they are cold to the touch before disposing of them.
- * If possible, you are encouraged to use camp stoves to help conserve ground cover resources. If you do build a fire, be sure to gather only dead and down wood for your personal use while camping.

WATER:

Streams and lakes are home to many microscopic bugs; some of them can make you very sick. So, don't take a chance; treat your water or bring water from home.

GARBAGE:

As Woodsy says: "Pack it in, Pack it out!"

Please leave your site cleaner than you left it.

HUMAN WASTE: (or, what to do when nature calls):

Don't laugh-everyone does it! Just be discreet.

- * Choose a spot at least 100 feet away from any stream or lake, and dig a small hole six inches deep; cover it and replace the duff.
- * Please, always dispose of your toilet paper properly.
