USDA Forest Service Insurance Requirements for filming/photography

Generally insurance is required for commercial operations on National Forest System Lands that involve the public. Some filming projects may only involve small crews with no public. It is up to the authorized officer to determine whether or not to require insurance.

To protect the user and the federal government from losses of life or property for which the permittee may be liable, the Forest Service requires permittees to carry public liability insurance naming the U.S. Government as additionally insured and providing a 30-day written notice prior to cancellation. Insurance limits begin at $300,000 combined single limit for lower risk operations involving smaller group sizes. Increased insurance limits will be required based on the amount of use, the risks involved, the protection on users, and the possible liability of the U.S. Government.
