

Custer and Gallatin National Forests
Public Service Announcement – November 2009

You are a Superhero! You have great power.

You fly down trails covering miles and miles in a single hour.

You can carry a quarter of an elk back to camp without even breaking a sweat.

You can see for miles from a mountain top and save your family from another weekend of brain-sucking TV.

You can explore more land in an afternoon than Lewis and Clark could in a week. Yes, you have great power.

But, with great power comes great responsibility. When you take your trail bike or ATV on to public land, you need to do the right thing. Know the regulations for riding in your area.

Be sensitive to disturbing animals, and others. And please, when riding, always, always stay on the trail.

You have the power to show your family the difference between real adventure and the virtual kind.

Use your power wisely. Please, stay on trails.

To find out where you can ride on the Custer and Gallatin National Forests, visit us online.