I live here too.

CLIMBING ETHICS:

While most climbers are committed to “minimal impact” practices, over time, climbing and other recreational activities have begun to make an impact on public land resources. It is up to each individual who uses the public lands to accept responsibility for themselves and for the care of this fragile environment. All climbers should support a “leave no trace” outdoor ethic when visiting.

WHAT YOU CAN DO:

- Climb in small numbers. Disperse your activities.
- Use established trails to reach climbing areas. Short cuts cause plant damage and erosion.
- Minimize chalk use and brush off heavily chalked holds. If you must use chalk, please use pigmented chalks that blend in with the natural colors of the rock.
- Pack out what you bring in. Do not leave tape, cigarette butts, food wraps and leftovers, or other litter. Leave the area cleaner than you found it.
- Treat the rock gently. Do not chip, chisel, glue, graffiti (tag), or otherwise deface rock resources. Leave the rock and surrounding area in its natural condition. ABSOLUTELY NO NEW BOLTING is permitted anywhere on public lands in the San Luis Valley.
- Keep your distance from wildlife. Rattlesnakes are common in Penitente canyon. Avoid disturbing cliff nesting birds. Penitente canyon is also home to black bears.
