| Recommendation Rationale | | | | | |
| The original evaluation provided information on location and abundance only in WY, although the species is also known from CO. Habitat in WY was described as montane bogs, swamps, wet meadows, and streambanks from 6800 – 8000 ft in elevation. Peat mining/hydrologic alteration and grazing impacts, especially during drought years, were identified as potential threats, but the risk may have been overstated since the species is not limited to peatland habitats. Probable security of populations in National Parks or other areas outside of R2 does not relieve us of Regional concern for viability. We conclude that additional information, particularly on status and distribution in Colorado, is needed in order to determine whether sensitive status is warranted. | | | | | |
