Fire Update.

The focus of suppression effort in the southeast portion of the fire continues to be in the Blue River drainage with the objective to keep the fire west of Blue Canyon and north of Strayhorse Creek and east of U.S. 191. Fire Crews have completed direct handline along the entire southern perimeter of the fire. Patrolling of the line for hot spots continues in the remainder of the southeast portion of the fire with structure protection continuing in the vicinity of Luna.

On the fire's edge from US 191 continuing clockwise to Nutrioso, Ariz., crews are working at least 300 feet into the burned area extinguishing all visible smokes. US 191 and other roads are closed because of continued fire suppression and to ensure public and firefighter safety. Hazard tree removal is on going along US 191 in preparation for a future reopening of the highway. Crews are working to repair firelines and fences that were damaged during the fire. Aircraft and firefighters are patrolling for fire and smoke, which will be visible in scattered islands well within containment lines.

Burn Area Emergency Response (BAER) treatments are being implemented starting this week with four 20 person hand crews clearing debris out of drainage bottoms around the Nutrioso, Greer and Eagar areas. Fire suppression crews are accomplishing fire line repairs on lines no longer required for control of the fire.

Elk are continuing to create a safety hazard as they are present on or near most of the highways and roads. Holding speeds below 55 mph, especially from dusk to dawn when elk are most active, will greatly reduce the risk of an accident.

Temperatures will continue to be hot and dry with conditions being mostly sunny, high near 86, north winds 5-8 mph becoming south between 18-21 mph, with winds gusting as high as 31 mph and relative humidity 7-12%. There is a slight chance of dry thunderstorms in the afternoon.

The National Weather Service on potential flooding: The Wallow Fire burned vast portions of the White Mountains including areas of steep terrain which will make numerous locations vulnerable to flash floods and debris flows even in moderate intensity (10 – 15 minutes) rains. Some area streams and rivers are likely to see flows beyond anything seen in decades if typical or above average rains occur. Residents should be aware that area roadways may become impassible due to mud, rock and debris slides or due to streams and washes overwhelming existing culverts and bridges.

- Public Safety: Smoke from the ongoing wildfires in Ariz. will continue to impact residents in the Wallow Fire area including southwestern N.M.
