

Preserving the Past

Tahoe National Forest

Help Preserve Our Past

As you enjoy the scenic beauty and recreation activities of the forest, you're part of a continuing

Liquor bottle found in a mining camp.

historical process. Like a great history book, the Tahoe National Forest holds the record of thousands of years of human history. Settlement by trappers, miners, ranchers and loggers and others dates back to the mid-19th century.

Thousands of years of human life in this area left evidence of people who did not create a written history—the Washoe, Nisenan, and the Northern Maidu, the three native tribes indigenous to the Tahoe National Forest.

Evidence of the Past

When the written record is incomplete or when no written record exists, we must look for other evidence of how people lived. Much of the evidence of how the indigenous people and the early emigrants encountered and solved the problems of survival exists on the ground as archaeological sites.

Bedrock mortar at a Nisenan site.

These records of the past may be recognized as a few “meaningless” flakes of stone, or an old miner’s bottle, or an arrowhead. Professional anthropologists, archaeologists, and historians can be with a page or chapter missing.

Door latch found at a townsite.

examine these undisturbed remains and interpret the past with great accuracy. But once a single object is removed from a site, the record is damaged and incomplete—much like a book would

Since 1906, explicit Federal laws have been in place to protect our historic and national heritage from unnecessary destruction. Unfortunately, the loss of cultural resources continues.

Many sites on the Tahoe National Forest have been looted or irrevocably damaged. Please help us prevent further destruction of our national heritage.

If you discover an archaeological or historic object or site, enjoy what is there, but please do not disturb anything or remove artifacts from the site. Please call the Tahoe National Forest Headquarters at (530) 265-4531 with a report of your discovery, so it can be evaluated by our Heritage Resources staff.

Remember, the future of the past is the present! Thank you for protecting our common heritage.

All Are Welcome

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in all its programs and activities on the basis of race, color, national origin, age, disability, and where applicable, sex, marital status, familial status, parental status, religion, sexual orientation, genetic information, political beliefs, reprisal, or because all or part of an individual's income is derived from any public assistance program. (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs.) Persons with disabilities who require alternative means for communication of program information (Braille, large print, audiotope, etc.) should contact USDA's TARGET Center at (202) 720-2600 (voice and TDD). To file a complaint of discrimination, write to USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, 1400 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20250-9410, or call (800) 795-3272 (voice) or (202) 720-6382 (TDD). USDA is an equal opportunity provider and employer.

United States Department of Agriculture

Forest Service
Pacific Southwest Region
www.fs.fed.us/r5/

Tahoe National Forest
www.fs.fed.us/r5/tahoe/