Corrugated, Plain, or Painted

There are three distinctive types of pottery that the prehistoric people in this region used: Plain Ware, Corrugated, and Painted. Plain Ware was used for cooking, storage, and everyday use. Corrugated, coiled pottery with an imprinted design, was more durable than smooth pottery and was used for cooking. Painted pottery was used for trade, serving food, storage, and ceremonial purposes. Painted pottery took a lot of time and artistry to produce.
