Welcome to the Grand Mesa National Forest. Some of the finest fishing in the Western slope.

The Grand Mesa is commonly referred to as one of the "Worlds Largest Flattop Mountain." The Grand Mesa averages 10,000 feet in elevation and towers 6,000 feet above the surrounding Colorado and Gunnison river valleys. The Grand Mesa is well known for its numerous natural lakes. In all, some 300 lakes and reservoirs lie on the benches and top of the Grand Mesa. Of these, roughly a third provide the aquatic habitat needed to sustain trout populations. Primary boating use is by small watercraft with less than 10 hp motors.
