

SOUTH SANDY SHOOTING RANGE

U.S. Department of Agriculture
Forest Service
Southern Region
August 2012 R8-RG 460

The shooting range is located on the Talladega National Forest, adjacent to the Oakmulgee Wildlife Management Area. It is open for shooting practice seven days a week during daylight hours.

All 16 shooting benches face target berms at 25 and 100 yards. Two of the benches are wheelchair accessible, complete with wheelchair access for target retrieval. A special area is designated for clay target shooting. The sanitary facility adjacent to the shooting area is also wheelchair accessible.

South Sandy Shooting Range is managed by a partnership: the Talladega National Forest, the Oakmulgee District and the Alabama Wildlife and Freshwater Fisheries Division. The range was established with funding from the Wildlife Restoration Fund, which distributes money from federal excise taxes on firearms and ammunition.

States can use the funds for wildlife restoration, hunter education and shooting sports projects.
