JUSTIFICATION:

Based on aerial surveys conducted by the Alaska Department of Fish and Game (ADF&G), there has been a steep decline in the Kenai Mountains caribou herd (Figure 1). Accordingly, ADF&G restricted the harvest of caribou in the DC001 drawing hunt to bulls only.

The Kenai Mountains caribou herd has been on a steady decline since its last peak of 375 animals in 2001. This decline intensified between 2020 and 2022. The most recent minimum count of the Kenai Mountains herd was 55 animals. Factors driving the decline in the herd are likely related to natural population dynamics, winter conditions, and limited winter range.

The Federal Subsistence Board delegated authority to the Seward District Ranger to manage the Unit 7 caribou hunt for the 2025 season. To address this conservation concern while maintaining the greatest sustainable opportunity for subsistence harvest, the Federal hunt is closed to the harvest of cows. This action is effective for 60 days. After a public hearing is held, this action may be extended to December 31, 2025.
