20. HERITAGE RESOURCES:

The heritage resource sites on the Coronado National Forest are rich and varied, spanning thousands of years of human history. Special Uses Permit holders can help the Forest Service to preserve these resources for the enjoyment of future generations by following some simple guidelines.

1. Do not camp, drive, or build campfires atop heritage resource sites. Fire and excessive ground disturbance can damage fragile heritage resources.
 2. Stay on designated trails whenever possible and use established trails when viewing heritage sites so as to minimize further ground disturbance. Avoid trampling and handling artifacts. Irreversible cumulative damage can occur to a site when repeatedly visited. Tread lightly.
 3. Artifacts provide archaeologists with important information regarding the life ways of past cultures. Leave all artifacts where they are found this includes "arrowheads". The location of artifacts in a site is important to understanding the function of the site.
 4. Oil from hands can cause rock art drawings to deteriorate. Do not touch the drawings.
5. Inform clients of heritage resource laws and protection requirements and insure that clients comply with these laws. Report any signs of illegal activity to the Coronado National Forest Contact listed in Section 7 above in this Operating Plan.

21. OPERATING PLAN LIMITATIONS:

- A. This Operating Plan is developed pursuant to Clause VII.J (R3 B38) of the Special-Use Permit which authorizes these activities, and contains mitigating conditions herein deemed necessary to protect National Forest resources. The permit holder is also hereby placed on notice that other federal, state, or local agencies may have additional mitigation measures or permits which must be secured. Failure to meet those additional mitigation measures, or secure those other permits, may result in enforcement actions against the permit holder by the appropriate agency.

B. This plan attempts to be as complete as possible; however, all situations and eventualities cannot be addressed. In these situations, good judgment shall be used to ensure public health and safety.

Signatures on this operating plan indicates acceptance of all the conditions as described.
