1011 - Federal Laws

All direction governing Forest Service programs and operations is set forth in or derived from Federal statutes.

1011.04 - Responsibilities

Line officers are responsible for ensuring that employees are aware of the provisions of law applicable to their responsibilities and that Forest Service programs and operations are administered in compliance with applicable laws. The Director of Legislative Affairs is responsible for making available to units the text of major laws relating to Forest Service activities, including notification of newly approved statutes. The Director is also responsible for assisting units, upon request, in citing or obtaining the text of copies of other laws.

1011.08 - Sources

The pertinent parts of the most important laws governing Forest Service programs can be found in Agriculture Handbook No. 453, The Principal Laws Relating to Forest Service Activities. Generally, the handbook includes laws that have Forest Service-wide application. Laws specific to just one Region are included only to the extent that their provisions apply nationwide. The handbook includes only those portions of laws that give the Forest Service (or the Secretary of Agriculture on Forest Service-related matters) authority or discretion to act, or that require Forest Service compliance with their provisions. A few laws, which primarily affect other departments or agencies, are included because they have significant informational value or because of indirect Forest Service involvement.

Employees who need to refer to other laws not contained in Agriculture Handbook No. 453 can find them in the following publications:

1. United States Statutes at Large. Published every 2 years at the conclusion of each Congress, the Statutes at Large contain the complete text of public and private laws arranged in chronological order of signing or approval.
2. United States Code. The Code contains laws and parts of laws arranged by subject matter. There are 50 titles, and each title has numerous chapters, subchapters, sections, and subsections. The text of the Code is assigned section numbers. The Code is completely revised and reprinted every 6 years, and intervening supplements are issued annually. Because not all laws are codified, a user may still have to consult the Statutes at Large. The advantage of using the Code is that all information on a particular subject is found in one place, with cross-references to related material.
3. United States Code Annotated. The Annotated Code is published quarterly by a commercial firm and updates the Code before the Government Printing Office publishes the annual supplements to the Code.

These reference aids are usually found in large libraries and legal offices, including regional offices of the Office of the General Counsel and United States attorneys' offices. In addition, United States attorneys have access to JURIS, a computerized search system for locating information in the Code and Statutes at Large.
